

Randl Partners Labour Code Commentary in English

Prague, March 9, 2011 – The publisher Wolters Kluwer has released the first English commentary to the Czech Labour Code, authored by Nataša Randlová and Petr Hůrka.

“While preparing the Commentary, we applied our experience advising foreign employers and employees for whom our Labour Code is incomprehensible”, says Nataša Randlová of Randl Partners law firm. “Unfortunately, they are not able to consult the Czech legal literature to understand how to interpret its provisions. We have tried to provide simple explanations for particular provisions, using numerous practical examples. It is the first English Commentary to the Czech Labour Code, and I hope it will become a practical aid to everyone who works with its English text”.

The Commentary is a collaboration of two leading experts in labour and employment law in the Czech Republic. They applied their many years of practical experience founded on theoretical knowledge. The main intention was to create a practical guide through the Czech Labour Code for everyday use by private sector employers and employees. The publication is not intended for the public-sector; the Commentary provides only a basic analysis of provisions related to this sector. Its focus is on practical knowledge rather than to provide a theoretical background.

The publication can be ordered online here: <http://obchod.wkcr.cz/obchod/prace-a-mzdy/labour-code-commentary.html>.

About the authors:

Nataša Randlová is a founding partner of Randl Partners, attorneys at law. She is recommended as a leading expert in labour and employment law by a number of foreign publications (PLC Which Lawyer?, Global Law Experts, Chambers Europe). She is also an adjunct lecturer at the Faculty of Law of the University of West Bohemia in Pilsen. She has authored numerous publications in the area of labour and employment law and is a frequent speaker at seminars in the Czech Republic and abroad. While preparing the Commentary, Natasa closely cooperated with members of the employment law team of Randl Partners: Romana Kaletová, Attorney; and Daša Aradská, Barbora Suchá and Ondřej Chlada, Associates.

Petr Hůrka works at the faculties of law of Charles University in Prague and the University of West Bohemia in Pilsen. He is a member of the legislative committee of the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs, author of many specialised publications and a prominent lecturer in the Czech Republic and abroad.

Randl Partners, a member of Ius Laboris, is the only niche employment law firm in the Czech Republic. It provides companies and individuals with legal advice in employment law, collective bargaining and human resources. Here, clients can find reliable and well-balanced legal advice at the highest level of expertise.
